Part One: General Policy Statement

The parliamentary agencies wish to implement closer working arrangements to ensure that the functions and services performed by each agency are aligned as closely as possible, and that duplication is minimised. To achieve this result most efficiently, the parliamentary agencies wish to share a number of services. To enable this to occur, the Parliamentary Service Act 2000 and the Clerk of the House of Representatives Act 1988 need to be amended to empower delegation between the agencies' staff. These amendments are intended to reflect the changes made to the State Sector Act in 2013 to continue the existing alignment between the Parliamentary Service Act, the Clerk of the House of Representatives Act and the State Sector Act in respect of employment matters.
